CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

"In sheer desperation I went to the ministry of the interior and sought an interview with the baron, who, when I told him of the disaster, appeared greatly concerned, and went at once to the police department to make inquiry. Next day, however, he came to me with the news that the charge against my mother had been proved by a statement of the woman Ship-roff herself, and that she had already started on her long journey to Siberia—she had been exiled to one of those dreaded Arctic settlements beyond Yakutsk, a place where it is almost eternal winter, and where the conditions of life are such that half the convicts are insane. The baron, however, declared that, as my father's friend, it was his duty to act as guardian to me, and that as my father had been English I ought to be put to no English school. Therefore, with his self-assumed title of uncle, he took me to Chichester. For years I remained there, until one day he came suddenly and fetched me away, taking me over to Helsingfors—for the czar had now appointed him governor-general to Finland. There, for the first time, he introduced me to his son Michael, a pimply-faced lieutenant of cavalry, and said in a most decisive manner that I must marry him. I naturally refused to marry a man of whom I knew so little, whereupon, finding me obdurate, he quickly altered his tactics and became kindness itself, saying that as I was young he would allow me a year in which to make up my mind.

"A week later, while living in the palace at Helsingfors, I overheard a conversation between the governor-general and his son, which revealed to me a staggering truth that I had never suspected. It was Oberg himself who had denounced my mother to the minister of the interior, and had made those cruel, baseless charges against her! Then I discerned the reason. She had been his enemy, as well as that of my father, came to me. The reason they were scheming for Michael to marry me was in order to obtain control of my money, and then, after the necessary legal formalities, I should, on a trumped-up charge of conspiracy, share the same fate as my mother had done."

"The infernal scoundrel!" I ejaculated, when I read her words while from Jack, who had been looking over my shoulder, escaped a fierce and forcible vow of vengeance.

"The baron took me with him to Petersburg when he went on official business, and we remained there nearly a month," the narrative went on. "While there I received a secret message from 'The Red Priest,' the unseen and unknown power of nihilism, who has for so many years baffled the police. I went to see him, and he revealed to me how Oberg had contrived to have my mother banished upon a false charge. He warned me against the man who had pretended to be my father's friend, and also told me that he had known my father intimately, and that if I got into any further difficulty I was to communicate with him and he would assist me. Oberg took me back to Helsingfors a few months later, and in summer we went to England. He was a remarkably clever diplomatist. His tactics he could change at will. When I was at school he was rough and brutal in his manner towards me, as he was to all; but now he seemed to be endeavoring to inspire my confidence by treating me, with kindly regard and pleasant affability.

"In London, at Claridge's, we met my old schoolfellow Muriel and her father—a friend of Oberg's—and in response to their invitation went for a cruise on their yacht, the Iris, from Southampton. Our party was a very pleasant one, and included Woodroffe and Chater, while our cruise across the Bay of Biscay and along the Portuguese coast proved most delightful. One night, while we were lying outside Lisbon, Woodroffe and Chater, together with Ollinto, went ashore, and when they returned in the early hours of the morning they awoke me by crossing the deck above my head. Then I heard someone outside my cabin door working as though with a screwdriver, unscrewing a screw from the woodwork. This aroused my interest, and next day I made a minute examination of the paneling, where, in one part, I found two small brass screws that had evidently been recently removed. Therefore I succeeded in getting hold of a screwdriver from the carpenter's shop, and next night, when everyone was asleep, I crept out and unscrewed the panel, when to my surprise I saw that the secret cavity behind was filled with beautiful jewelry, diamond collars, tiaras, necklaces, fine pearls, emeralds and turquoise, all thrown in indiscriminately.

"I replaced the panel and kept careful watch. At Marseilles, where we called, more jewelry and a heavy bagful of plate was brought aboard and secreted behind another panel. Then I knew that the men were thieves.

"Well, one hot summer's night we were lying off Naples, and as it was a grand festa ashore and there was to be a gala performance at the theater, Lethecourt took a box and the whole party were rowed ashore. The crew were also given shore-leave for the evening, but as the great heat had upset me I declined to accompany the theater party and remained on board with one sailor named Wilson to constitute the watch. We had anchored about half a mile from land, and earlier in the evening the baron had gone ashore to send telegrams to Russia and had not returned.

"About ten o'clock I went below to try and sleep, but I had a slight attack of fever, and was unable. Therefore I redressed and sat with the light still on, gazing across the starlit bay. Presently from my port-hole I saw a shadowy approach, and recognized in it the baron with a well-dressed stranger. They both came on board, and the boatman, having been paid, pulled back to the shore. Then the baron and his friend—a dark, middle-aged, full-bearded man, evidently a person of refinement—went below to the saloon, and after a few moments called to the man Wilson who was on watch, and gave him a glass of whisky and water, which he took up on deck to drink at his leisure.

"The unusual character of my fellow-guests on board that craft was such that my suspicion was constantly on the alert. Therefore curiously tempted me to creep along and peep in at the crack of the door standing ajar. A closer view revealed the fact that the stranger was a high Russian official to whom I had once been introduced at the government palace at Helsingfors, the Privy Councillor and Senator Paul Polovostoff. They were smoking together, and were discussing in Russian the means by which he, Polovostoff, had arranged to obtain plans of some new British fortifications at Gibraltar. From what he said, it seemed that some Russian woman, married to an Englishman, a captain in the garrison, had been impressed into the secret service against her will, but that she had, in order to save herself, promised to obtain the photographs and plans that were required. I heard the Englishman's name, and I resolved to take some steps to inform him in secret of the intentions of the Russian agent.

"Presently the two men took fresh cigars, ascended on deck, and cast themselves in the long cane chairs amidships. Still all curiously to hear further details on the ingenious piece of espionage against my own nation, I took off my shoes and crept up to a spot where I could crouch concealed and overhear their conversation, for the Italian night was calm and still. They talked mainly about affairs in Finland, and with some of Oberg's expressions of opinion Polovostoff ventured to differ. Suddenly, while the privy councillor lay back in his chair pulling thoughtfully at his cigar, there was a bright, blood-red flash, a dull report, and a man's short, agonized cry. Startled, I leaped around the corner of the deckhouse, when, to my abject horror, I saw under the electric rays the czar's privy councillor lying face down in his chair with part of his side blown away. Then the hideous truth in an instant became apparent. The cigar which Oberg had pressed upon him down in the saloon had exploded, and the small missile concealed inside the diabolical contrivance had passed upwards into his brain. For a moment I stood utterly stupefied, yet as I looked I saw the baron, in a paroxysm of rage, shake his fist in the dead man's face and cry with a fearful imprecation: 'You honed! You have plotted to replace me in the czar's favor. You intended to become governor-general of Finland! You knew certain facts which I intended to put before his majesty, knowing that the revelations would result in my disgrace and downfall. But, you—those who attempt to thwart Xavier Oberg—either die by accident or go for life to Kajaana or the mines!' And he spurred the body with his foot and laughed to himself as he gloated over his dastardly crime.

"I watched his rage, unable to utter a single word. I saw him, after he had searched the dead man's pockets, raise the inert body with its awful featureless face and drag it to the bulwarks. Then I rushed forward and faced him.

"In an instant he sprang at me, and I screamed. But no aid came. The man Wilson was sleeping soundly in the bows, for the whisky he had given him had been doctored," went on the narrative. "Upon his face was a fierce, murderous look such as I had never seen before. 'You!' he screamed, his dark eyes starting from their sockets as he realized that I had been a witness of his cowardly crime. 'You have spied upon me, girl!' he hissed, 'and you shall die also!' I sank upon my knees imploring him to spare me, but he only laughed at my entreaty. 'See!' he cried, 'as you saw how he enjoyed his cigar, you may as well see this!' And with an effort he raised the dead body in his arms, poised it for a moment on the vessel's side, and then, with a hoarse laugh of triumph, heaved it into the sea. There was a splash, and then we were alone. 'And you!' he cried in a fierce voice—you who have spied upon me—you will follow! The water there will close your chatter mouth!' I shrieked, begged, and implored, but his trembling hands were upon my throat. First he dragged me to my feet, then he threw me upon my knees, and at last, with that grim brutality which characterizes him, he directed me to go and get a mop and bucket from the fore-cabin and remove the dark red stains from the chair and deck. This he actually forced me to do, glowering over my horror as I removed for him the traces of his cowardly crime. Then, with his hand upon my shoulder, he said: 'Girl! Recollect that you keep to-night's work secret. If not, you shall die a death more painful than that dog has died—one in which you shall experience all the tortures of the damned. Recollect, not a single word—or death! Now, go to your cabin, and never pry into my affairs again.'

"A great sensation was caused when the body was discovered. The squadron was lying off Naples about a week after the Iris had left, and while we were there the body was washed up near Sorrento. At first but little notice was taken of it, but by the marks on the dead man's linen it was discovered that he was Polovostoff, one of the highest Russian officials, who had, it was said, been warned on several occasions by the nihilists. It was, therefore, concluded that his death had been due to nihilist vengeance.

"The real reason why the baron spared my life was because, if I died, my fortune would pass to a distant cousin living at Durham. Yet his manner towards me was now most polite and pleasant—a change that I felt boded no good. He intended to obtain my money by marrying me to his son Michael, whose evil reputation as a gambler was well known in Petersburg. We traveled back to Finland in the autumn, and in the winter he took me to stay with his sister in Nice. Yet almost daily he referred to that tragedy at Naples, and threatened me with death if ever I uttered a single word, or even admitted that I had ever seen the man who was his rival and his victim."

"Last June," commenced another paragraph, "we were in Helsingfors,

When Everyone Was Asleep I Crept Out and Unscrewed the Panel.

when one day the baron called me suddenly and told me to prepare for a journey. We were to cross to Stockholm and thence to Hull, where the Iris was awaiting us, for Mr. Lethecourt and Muriel had invited us for a summer cruise to the Greek islands. We boarded the yacht much against my will, yet I was powerless, and dare not allege the facts that I had already established concerning our fellow-passengers. Muriel and I, it seems, were taken merely in order to blind the shore-guards and customs officials as to the real nature of the vessel, which went safely out of the channel, was repainted and renamed the Lola; until her exterior presented quite a different appearance from the Iris.

"The port of Leghorn was our first place of call, and for some reason we ran purposely upon a sandbank and were towed off by Italian torpedo boats. Next evening you came on board and dined, Muriel and myself having strict orders not to show ourselves. We, however, watched you, and I saw you pick up my photograph which I had that day torn up. Then immediately after you had a couple of hours in the middle of the night, just before they returned the baron, rapped at the door of my cabin, telling me to dress and accompany him. He would never allow me the luxury of a maid, fearing, I suppose, that she might learn too much. In obedience I rose and dressed, and when I went forth he told me to get my traveling cloak and dressing bag, adding that he was compelled to go north, as to continue the cruise would occupy too much time. He was due back at his official duties, he said. As soon as I had finished packing, the three men returned to the vessel, all of them looking dark-faced and disappointed. Woodroffe whispered some words to the baron, after which I went to Muriel's cabin and wished her good-by, and we went ashore, taking the train first to Colle Salveti, thence to Pisa, and afterwards to the beautiful old city of Siena, which I had so longed to see. One of my teeth gave me pain, and the baron, after a couple of days at the Hotel de Senne, took me to a queer-looking little old Italian—a dentist who, he said, enjoyed an excellent reputation. I was quick to notice that the two men had met before, and as I sat in the chair and gasped at the sight of the dentist's meaning glances, in a few moments I became insensible, but when I awoke an hour later I was astounded to feel a curious soreness in my ears. My tongue, too, seemed paralyzed, and in a few moments the awful truth dawned upon me. I had been rendered deaf and dumb!

"The baron pretended to be greatly concerned about me. It went on, 'but I quickly realized that I had been the victim of a foul and dastardly plot, and that he had conceived it, fearing lest I might speak the truth concerning the Privy Councillor Polovostoff, for of exposure he lived in constant fear. To encompass my end would be against his own interests, as he would lose my fortune, so he had silenced me lest I should reveal the terrible truth concerning both him and his associates. He was not rich, and I have reason to believe that from time to time he gave information as to persons who possessed valuable jewels, and thus shared in the plunder obtained by those on the yacht.

"From Italy we traveled on to Berlin, thence to Petersburg, and back to dreary Helsingfors. Journeying as quickly as we could, yet never allowing me opportunity of being with strangers. Both my ears and tongue were very painful, but I said nothing. He was surely a fiend in a black coat, and my only thought now was how to escape him. From the moment when that so-called dentist had ruined my hearing and deprived me of power of speech, he kept me aloof from everything but apparently grown to haunt him; and he had conceived that terrible mode of silencing my lips. But the true depth of his villainy was not yet apparent until I was back in Finland.

"On the night of our arrival he called in his son, who had traveled with us from Petersburg, and in writing again demanded that I should marry him. I wrote my reply—a firm refusal. He struck the table angrily with his fist and wrote saying that I should either marry his son or die. Then next day, while walking alone out beyond the town of Helsingfors, as I often used to do, I was arrested upon the false charge of an attempt upon the life of Madame Yakovoff and transported, without trial, to the terrible fortress of Kajaana, some of the horrors of which you have yourself experienced. The charge against me was necessary before I could be incarcerated there, but once within, it was the scheme of the governor-general to obtain my consent to the marriage by threats and by the constant terrors of the place. He even went so far as to obtain a ministerial order for my banishment to Saghellen and brought it to me to Kajaana, declaring that if in one month I did not consent he should allow me to be sent to exile. While I was in Kajaana he knew that his secret was safe, therefore by every means in his power he urged me to consent to the odious union.

"All the rest is known to you—how Providence directed you to me as my deliverer, and how Woodroffe followed you in secret, and pretending to be my friend, took me with him to Petersburg. He had learned of my fortune from the baron, and intended to marry me himself. But now that all is over it appears to me like some terrible dream. I never believed that so much iniquity existed in the world, or that men could fight a defenseless woman with such double-dealing and cruel ingenuity. Ah! the tortures I endured in Kajaana are beyond human conception. Yet surely Oberg and Woodroffe will obtain their well-merited deserts—if not in this world, then in the world to come. Are we not taught by Holy Writ to forgive our enemies? Therefore, let us forgive."

"There my silent love's strange story ended. A bald, straightforward narrative that held us all for some moments absolutely speechless—one of the strangest and most startling stories ever revealed.

"She watched every expression of my countenance, and then, when I had finished reading and placed my arm tenderly about her slim waist, she raised her beautiful face to mine to receive the passionate kiss I imprinted upon those soft, full lips.

"This, of course, makes everything plain," exclaimed Jack. "Polovostoff was a very liberal minded and upright official who was greatly in the favor of the czar, and a serious rival to Oberg, whose drastic and merciless methods in Finland were not exactly approved by the emperor. The baron was well aware of this, and by ingeniously entangling him on board the Iris he succeeded by handing the small bomb concealed in a cigar—a nihilist contrivance that had probably been seized by his police in Finland—in freeing himself from the rival who was destined to occupy his post."

"Yes," I said with a sigh. "The mystery is cleared up. It is true, my poor Elma is still the victim. And I kissed my love passionately again and again upon the lips.

THE END.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Birds of the White House Enjoy Shower Baths

WASHINGTON.—The feathered tenants of the White House grounds have discovered the delights of the shower bath. And birds of many kinds are taking advantage of the excellent accommodations provided by the rotary lawn sprinkler. The blackbirds, most inquisitive and curious of all birds, first found out about it. It may have been accident that led the bird Columbus in this exploit under the spluttering drops of water thrown off by the sprinkler. If so he found it good. Generous, or unable to keep his counsel, he spread the news. Other blackbirds tried it with resulting delight. Then the tale spread of this advance in bird civilization.

And still the wonder grew as bird after bird submitted itself to the pleasure of the bath. The sparrows, who inhabit two whole trees in the White House grounds when they are at home for a night's rest, found it so good that they quarreled for place and turn.

Then a few thrushes who live in the precincts acquired the shower-bath habit. And finally the pigeons and doves, slowest to adopt new customs, were converted. So the shower-bath cult has grown among the birds.

There are a half dozen such lawn sprinklers scattered over the White House grounds, with purpose or hope to make the grass grow. They are going all day, scattering drops of rain in an ever revolving circle. As is modest, the birds take their shower baths in secluded spots where the sprinklers are at work.

"Old Nick," the Champion Long-Distance Smoker

UNCLE SAM has the champion long-distance smoker of the world, consuming 1,000 cigars a day on an average. They call him "Old Nick," not because he is in any way diabolical, but because he can hold an amazing amount of nicotine. And it takes very little effort of the imagination to characterize "Old Nick" as a human being; for, in make-up, he performs all the functions of the flesh and blood lover of the weed, even to the action of the lungs. "Old Nick" is merely an ingenious apparatus for testing cigars.

Uncle Sam's mechanical man is no fastidious chooser of what he smokes. The most expensive imported brand and the humblest of the domestic are the same to him. In the lower left-hand corner of his mechanical anatomy is a jar, in the cork of which are inserted the tubes holding four cigarettes. The receptacle contains water which takes up the nicotine. So it is cigars. The cigarette goes into the "lungs" of "Old Nick," and the smoke that goes out from his "mouth"—the exhaust—is wholly free from nicotine. The "lungs" is at the extreme right and inhales and exhales the smoke of the cigars.

A tube leads into the "lung" from the jar into which four individual cigar tubes are placed. There is also an intermediate jar, which arrests whatever of the nicotine may have escaped from the direct repository.

Thus, you see that while "Old Nick" may be literally soaked in nicotine and be a confirmed "inhaler," he has none of the vice of the inhaler, for the smoke that enters his "lungs" bears no deleterious elements.

One Woman Who Knows Secrets, and Keeps Them

THERE is only one woman in the United States who has knowledge of international events before they happen. Her name is Margaret M. Hanna. She is the confidential secretary and assistant of the second assistant secretary of state, Alvey A. Adee, who is the only permanent official of high rank in the department.

No matter who may be the executive head of the department, and regardless of whether the administration be Democratic or Republican, the course of the foreign office is steered by Mr. Adee. All of the diplomatic affairs are managed by him. The complex unwritten code called international law is to him familiar in its every paragraph, and he has all precedents at his fingers' ends. But it goes without saying that such business involves an immense amount of detail, which is where the peculiar and exceptional talent of Miss Hanna comes into play. She takes all that part of the work off Mr. Adee's hands. To him she is like a card catalogue to a librarian—and quite a bit more, in addition.

Incidentally to her duties she helps to prepare many state papers that are in the last degree confidential in character. She is the custodian of many an important secret affecting the welfare of the country; but, from her point of view, this is merely a part of the day's work. She forgets the secret automatically when she leaves the office and goes home.

It has often been said that a woman cannot keep a secret. Perhaps most women cannot. Holding that belief, wrongly or rightly, the department of state prefers not to employ them in confidential capacities. But the rule is broken in Miss Hanna's case. She knows how to keep a secret, and the government of the United States is willing to bank on her reliability in this regard.

Snake Bite Antidote for Forest Service Men

BEST pocket instruments for treating snake bites, always possibilities among the experiences that helpful woodsmen are to be furnished by the United States forest service to its field employees. The device when not in use is apparently a plain wooden cylinder, about the length of a cigarette and slightly larger in diameter, and has a screw cap on each end. When one of the caps is removed there is disclosed a small lancet, with which the bitten part may be quickly slit open. The other end of the cylinder is hollow and contains a supply of permanganate of potash crystals, one of the most effective antidotes for the poison of snake's fangs. The crystals are placed in the open wound as soon as possible after the bite is received, and become effective by dissolving and entering the blood. Similar instruments have been used regularly by the field force of the geological survey for several years and have in many cases been the means of saving life.

The dangers to which forest workers are subjected of being bitten by poisonous reptiles are forcibly brought out in a recent report to forest service headquarters in Washington from the Shasta national forest in northern California. Three men, sent across the path of a recent fire to fight flames, found themselves completely surrounded by scores of rattlesnakes that had been driven from their rocky lairs by the heat. It was necessary for the fire-fighters to turn snake-fighters, since they could neither advance nor retreat. After a six-hour battle all the reptiles were killed and it was possible for the forest employees to reach and extinguish the fire.

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubbery
Their Care and Cultivation

Beautiful Specimens of White Carnations.

BULB FOR NEXT SPRING

If you would have rich beds of tulip or gladiolus, or the corners of your lawns beautiful springlike yellow or white of narcissus, daffodil and jonquil you must begin to think of the spring appearance of your garden the fall, for the bulbs of these flowers must be planted in the fall before the ground is frozen. In fact this work should be undertaken soon as or before an early frost begins to make the annual flowers the beds look weakened. In dealing with narcissus, which is the family which the daffodil and jonquil belong, it might be well to think of trying to naturalize the narcissus to grow blossom on the lawn much as do wild flowers. How to plant and how the bulbs, as well as the best kind of getting them to be coming residents of grassy corners, described in the following directions issued by the bulb specialists: the United States department of agriculture.

The bulbs should be planted in light soil that has been dug to a depth of at least 10 inches. The bulbs should be set 5 inches apart and the narcissus about 10 inches apart and 5 in deep.

It is to be grown in pots or with boxes, light, rich soil should be placed one or two inches of either broken pots in the bottom of pots or boxes to insure good drainage. After planting, place the pots out of doors and cover them about four inches of ashes or, or they may be placed in a dark room or cellar for a few weeks until the bulbs have formed a good root. They may then be brought to the light and heat for flowering. Keep the soil well moist from time of planting, but avoid overwatering, for if kept too wet the bulbs will decay.

Cultivation.
In the field, the surface of the soil be loosened after each rain and kept free from weeds. In a fall or early winter months it is to cover the beds with a layer of straw or leaves to prevent the young roots from freezing and thawing of the soil. This mulch should be gradually removed in spring, as soon as the plants are above ground. The bulbs are hardy and are not injured by severe cold if the soil is well.

Lifting and Dividing.
Narcissus and narcissus plants are to be lifted and divided every year and if given proper care and under suitable soil and conditions will increase and bloom year to year. The bulbs may be lifted in the ground two or three, or until the clumps begin to show. After blossoming in the spring six to eight weeks should be allowed the foliage to wither down, when the bulbs may be lifted with a spade or fork.

Hardy Pinks.

AMONG THE FLOWERS

Among summer blossoms none are greater favorites than the syringa or mock orange, the flowers being as fragrant as beautiful. While the shrub itself is perfectly hardy, late frosts sometimes kill the buds; and an overbearing grower gives the rule that there will be orange blossoms when there are peaches.

Calycaanthus is a curious shrub, the brownish blossom being odorous of strawberries; yet with so many beautiful as well as fragrant blossoms it could scarcely need the list.

Purple fringe is an odd plant, the name smoke tree perhaps more accurately describing the appearance after midsummer, when the pedicels lengthen, branch and bear long, plummy hairs, either greenish or tinged with red.

The spigella is handsome when in bloom, the tubular blossoms of white, rose or purple being produced in profusion. A variety with leaves variegated with gold is especially pleasing. Instead of planting in rows the fancy is now to group the shrubs and the flowers for cutting. Place the taller ones in the rear with the shorter ones in front.

Arrange that the blooming season shall be prolonged throughout the summer, and so that no two specimens with blossoms which do not harmonize in color shall be in bloom side by side at the same time.

Plants can wait upon themselves if food, properly prepared, is placed within their reach.

A writer gives a little sketch of black and white. In Natal, he tells how he came across a white boy, some fourteen years old, and a group of natives playing a game. They were shooting with an old muzzle-loading shotgun at a bottle on the top of a case. When the youngster smashed a bottle he received a "licky" (a threepenny hit) from the natives. When a native hit it he received threepence from the boy.

"That seems a funny sort of game," remarked the witness to the boy.

"Oh, the game's all right, sir," replied the lad. "You see, I load the gun."

One on Rufus Cheate.

Judge Parry, in a recent article on "Rufus Cheate, Advocate," says on occasion Cheate would meet with his Suoi Weller. Defending a prisoner— theft of money from a ship's witness was called who had turned state's evidence and whose testimony went to prove that Cheate's client had instigated the theft.

"Well," asked Cheate, "what did he say? Tell us how and what he spoke to you."

"Why," said the witness, "he told us there was a man in Boston named Cheate and he'd get us off if they caught us with the money in our boots."

Not Here.

She was looking for an apartment. "It must be in a first class neighborhood," she said, "and it must have ten large rooms, three baths and all modern improvements, and I won't pay a cent over $40 a month."

"I know the very place you're looking for," replied the agent, "but if you want to find out how to get there you'll have to consult a clergyman."

A Religion With Him.

"What is your father's religion?"
"Golf, I guess. It's the only thing he does on Sundays."

A Series of Letters From a
New Comer to Her Mother

Dear Mother

Such a cold that I can hardly talk but that doesn't interfere with my writing. I don't know whether the cold came just in time or whether the King Pharmacy just took this time to advertise Rexall Cherry Bark cough syrup. Anyway the first thing I saw this morning was their ad in which they offer the coupon as 50 cents on a dollar bottle. Ma for the drug store and a bottle. Why not when for years we have bought things at the full price. It seems that the Rexall remedies are comparatively new here and that this idea is merely to show the people just how effective they are. It wouldn't be necessary with us would it? We know the Rexall remedies and know just how satisfactory they have been. Their standard slogan "If not satisfactory simply go to your druggist and say so—get your money—it belongs to you and we want you to have it" appeals to me. It is so too—no fuss simply your money back. Then again Rexall are simply the best that one can buy. Mr. King carries their complete line and tells me that over 7,000 druggists buy together in this way. The saving they make is given the customer so you can see that we benefit by having the Rexall line at King's.

The mill work was placed on the ground today and you never saw such work in your born days. When we placed the order with the Goodrich yard Mr. Hill told us that they handled the "Monogram mill work" and that there was simply none better made anywhere. I am so glad we took his advice. No matter where you look on a home nothing can make as much difference in appearance, either for good or bad as the millwork. Even the competitors admit that there is none better than Monogram. It was used in the Bank of Burlington, Burlington, Wis., and that is a beautiful building. This millwork is just another case of the quality effort put forth by the Goodrich yard.

While I was shopping today I dropped into Miss Schaffer's and bought me the dearest little Toque. One that just fits me and fits my pocket book. Of course I heard the cry that it might be cheaper to send away for hats but this is not so. I know because I have shopped in Chicago Millinery stores and it seems to me that with Miss Schaffer I am getting Chicago styles at home prices save the pocket book without in any way detracting from appearance. The fact that Miss Schaffer does her own designing help too for she knows our people, knows what they want. I don't see how anyone can possibly over look the pretty showing here to send away for such a thing as a hat on which so much depends. Miss Schaffer's quality ought to argue good deal—of course it is not as cheap as we can buy but it is much cheaper than one can possibly buy the same thing for elsewhere. It seems to me that any woman would simply be afraid to trust mail order millinery—be afraid of just one comparison that would offset any ordinary saving. Doesn't it to you. I know that when I was told about it I thought someone else had tried it and just wanted me to be in the same fix. No thanks. I know that Miss Schaffer's styles and quality is good enough for me even though I might save the enormous sum of 17 cents on something not as good by spending a two cent stamp.

Together we have bought all of our builders hardware and bath room fixtures and these are all in town with no waiting. That comes of having a complete stock to trade with. I wouldn't undertake to estimate how large a stock Williams Brothers have got. One whole side of their big store is devoted to Hardware. When it came to making our selection it was real easy. Just what we wanted and at mighty good prices. I've shopped around enough to know that this was so. We bought Devoes paints from them too. It does pay to trade right at home where one is given the stock to select from at the price we found at Williams.

So you know about our looking at the Overland before I wrote you? I forgot about Billy having seen father in the city. We were lucky in locating Mr. Rosenfeldt for from what I can find the Overland $3 comes nearer giving dollar for dollar than any car on the market. I guess its pretty much as Mr. Rosenfeldt says you come pretty near getting $500 worth of automobile for $500 and $750 for that amount but I really think that when one buys an Overland for $750 they are getting $1000 for $750. I'll tell you why. The Overland factory have the largest output of any factory in the world next to the Ford. They have systematized the manufacture so that on this enormous output they reduce the cost to the absolute minimum. THIS SAVING IN COST OF MANUFACTURE COMES RIGHT BACK TO YOU WHEN YOU BUY AN OVERLAND. I told you the best part of it was the fact that I could drive as well as Billy. The pedals are adjustable and have wide hinged pads while the levers are in the center, within easy reach and the control is simple and convenient. I know that the Overland suits us better than a cheaper car or a more expensive one.

Yes I agree with you that the meats are the most important part of the meal. About 8 out of ten of the things we eat come in tins but with meats one can't always depend on their own judgment. Right then is when it pays to have a butcher that knows. Mr. Powles knows meats and knows how to select the cuts that one wants. It pays too to trade with a market like this and to trade there all the time. In the case of the Powles market it doesn't cost you a cent more than it would to get indifferent service and when one stops to think that the butcher who knows how to cut meats, knows how to make his selections from the market saves you money the combination of service, price and quality looks pretty good to the family pocketbook.

I've been tramping around in the new shoes I bought from Mr. Cribb and while my feet are a little tired they feel good. I took them in and had the buttons set over. While I was waiting I just peeked around over the stock. You should see how carefully selected it is. Mr. Cribb makes his purchases from makers absolutely reputable goods and then stands right behind every sale himself. That is where one gets the best of buying at home—if there should happen to be the least thing wrong with a Cribb shoe its simple "your money back."

I saw a new Mutual movie film at the Antioch theater tonight one of their new releases. I am a regular "movie fan" and I like to go to shows not fur the inside of the theater but for the film itself. At the Antioch they can seat 300 people easily and you can choose any seat in the house and really see. This is caused I think by the fact that they have a projection of nearly 75 feet from a machine of the very newest type. Frank Hunt, the owner, told me that he made it a point to select his 4 reels so that the audience could have drama, comics and features. So that they enjoy the whole show. I believe him from what I have seen.

Why don't you write often. The home letters count you know.

Mable.

Avoiding Danger in Mines.

It is fairly a problem to install motors, controllers and other apparatus in mines in such a way as to avoid the danger of igniting fire damp. Modern practices in Europe now provides three protecting methods, all enclosed, partly enclosed, with use of wire gauze plates, and oil bath apparatus. Various apparatus, such as transformers, controllers and switches, need to have a special design for use in mines, not only on account of fire damp, but because of prevailing dampness and mist.

TRAGIC INCIDENT OF WARFARE ALONG THE MEXICAN BOUNDARY

Correspondent Tells of the Hospitality Extended to Him by a Mexican Couple Across the Rio Grande—Host Declains Against the Depredations of the Bandits—Later an American Farmer Tips Off Some "Real News."

By JOHN W. ROBERTS.
(International News Service.)
Brownsville, Tex. — "Que huvolo, amigo? Paso usted, you are well received."

I had ridden up on my horse to a little mud hut on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, and as I arrived I was met by four dogs, barking loudly, and the lord and master of the place—a small Mexican of many smiles and gleaming white teeth—who came forward to greet me.

"It is a very warm day, señor! Come into this house, which is yours, and permit me to unsaddle your horse so that he can feed on the bountiful grass which God has given us."

"My name is Roberts," I said, dismounting. "I am a newspaper man, and I came up this way for a ride." He stretched his hand in greeting. "Ramon Martinez, at your orders," he smiled. "While you are here please consider me your most humble servant."

I unsaddled my pony, and threw the saddle on the shady side of the adobe hut. Ramon removed the bridle, and with an affectionate slap on the beast's haunches, drove him out to the grass in the open prairie.

"Won't he get away?" I asked. "No, señor; he is hungry, therefore I will spend all his time filling his belly. Now, into my house, señor; it is a terrible here, and besides just in time for the dinner good wife is cooking."

"Use" had, as I thought, only in one corner, neatly rolled he wall, was some bedding served as settees. A number of calendars decorated the walls. Beneath them was a shelf; under which a candle burning. At the other end of the room a very pretty tiled floor, a brazier, a her perspiring brow as we and smiled prettily when her introduced me.

Host Is Amazed. "Is terrible," she laughed. "I do not have taken your good invitation you to partake of a dinner. We have nothing but tortillas and frijoles and coffee."

"Is there no chili?" her husband asked in surprise. "Oh, yes—and chili." "Sit down, amigo," Ramon said, "and let me be so rude as to ask you for a cigarette, we can smoke in comfort while Amalia cooks dinner."

I offered him my red case, from which he took a long, cork-tipped cigarette. "Ah! Muy fino," he said, as he puffed eagerly. "You must be a very rich man."

"No," I laughed. "Those only cost twenty-five cents, gold, a box."

"Vélate cinco centavos oro!" he exclaimed in amazement. "Why, why, that means twenty-five dollars of our money!" His astonishment was unlimited.

"What do you think of the warfare across the river?" I asked him. "Is it true that you Mexicans intend to invade our country? What does all this mean?" The question seemed to amuse Ramon immensely and he slapped his knee and roared in laughter.

"I was just discussing with my wife how foolish you Americans were to believe such tales. Most of the warfare going on over there is caused by the bad feeling between the Mexicans living in your own country and the American settlers. A lot of the Mexicans, of course, are brigands, who have been kicked out of the Carranzista army, and having nowhere else to go, cross over into Texas and enrich themselves by gathering a small band of paisanos and then raiding unprotected ranches of your countrymen. Of course, they carry guns, and if they are shot at, they return the fire, but as for war between the two nations—ah! It is very funny, and his body shook again as he laughed.

More Foolishness. "What about the plan of San Diego," I asked. "In which all Mexicans are invited to join an army which is going to invade the United States and capture Texas?"

"That is more foolishness which should not be taken seriously. It is the kind which these bandit leaders use to take men into their hands. As far as plans go, in señor, could not you, or I, draw up elaborate proclamations in which we declared war against the whole world? Does that mean that we could capture the world, or make an efficient warfare? Ridiculous!"

"Dinner is served," Amalia, blushing furiously, interrupted our conversation. She stood up and was wiping the perspiration from her face with a clean white towel. Next in appearance, round of figure, a delicate complexion and pretty white teeth gleaming in her soft red mouth, made Amalia an unusually attractive girl to look upon.

The dinner was served on a clean, oil table cloth, which had been spread out on the dirt floor. I was given the seat of honor, which was a soap box, while my hosts squatted themselves on the floor opposite me.

"You must excuse the meal," Amalia reiterated. "Four years of revolution has brought us hard times, and the job that my good husband Ramon had on an American ranch across the river—he lost it because of the trouble there. At that time we lived very happily because Ramon made a dollar a day, and we lived in some comfort, but since these bandits began to raid your ranches, the American will not tolerate a Mexican on his premises. I am so sorry," she finished, casting a loving look at her husband, "because Ramon is very good. He never beats me and always gives me most of what he earns."

Like in all Mexican homes of the lower classes, we had no spoons nor forks, so, as is the custom, we shared the beans and chile from the plates into our mouths with a piece of flat tortilla. The coffee, which was very weak and sugary, I could not drink. I explained to Amalia that I never drank coffee.

Down to Last Meal. "Oh! I should have offered you some milk. I have some fresh goat's milk here which is very good." She arose, and fetched an earthenware jar from which she poured the white liquid into my cup. Gingly I tasted it. It was my first experience with goat's milk, and I did not like it. In the first place, it is of a greenish yellow and much too sticky to drink in comfort. It had a strong smell of the sheep corral. However, so as not to disappoint my good hostess I placed the cup to my lips, held my breath and literally poured the liquid down my throat.

When we arose from our meal, I offered Ramon another cigarette which he accepted with alacrity. Amalia, in the meanwhile, was busily engaged in clearing the "table" and washing the dishes.

"She is a good woman," Ramon said lovingly as he watched her. "I have been unable to find any work since I was fired two weeks ago and I don't know what I am going to do. You may not believe it, señor, but we have provisions for only one more meal."

He hung his head as he puffed silently at his cigarette. "Damn those banditos!" he shook his fist fiercely towards the United States. "If those crazy compatriots of mine had not started this trouble I would not be in this condition. It is due to them that my Amalia has nothing to eat for the morning. It is due to them that we, the pacificos, suffer the name of 'bandit greasers.' I do not blame the Americans; they are defending their property and their families—I would do the same if the trouble were on this side, but I blame that band of disgruntled thieves who,

FAVORS LARGE NAVY

Senator Loo S. Overman, chairman of the senate rules committee and one of the administration's leaders in the senate, has announced himself as a supporter of a program for military preparedness. The senator called at the White House a few days ago and after his call announced his position on the matter. "I am for a large navy for the United States and I am heartily in favor of legislation that will make our coast defenses strong enough to ward off all kinds of attacks from the sea," said he. This picture shows Senator Overman leaving the White House executive offices.

unable to make a living on this side, start a racial war in your country. Four years of revolution has cleaned everything out of this country and our only hope to get anything to eat was on your side of the river. Now that is gone, and—ah! Dios, I do not know what we are going to do. I will not permit Amalia to go hungry," he added fiercely. "If it needs me I will sacrifice my life to get her food."

"You should not talk like that," admonished Amalia, who had finished her work, as she came towards us. "It is a sacrilege to talk like that. God will punish you." Amalia sat besides me and began to chatter laughingly about the two goats she owned. Imitating their gestures with her pretty hands, she told how the goats butted one another in an effort to capture some doliacay which she offered. She told me of Pedro, a pet horned toad which she had owned for five years.

"He will come whenever I call him," she added. "Pedro! Pedro! Pedro! Vente pa acá."

Almost immediately the little flat head of the intelligent pet peeped through the open doorway. The glaring sunlight played upon the colors on his fat belly. He scrambled over the threshold and came running towards his mistress. She picked him up and held him lovingly to her cheek. "Pedrito, Pedrito," she cried caressingly, "I love you so much!" and she walked to the other end of the room where she fed him a large piece of tortilla.

"Well, Ramon, I must be going now," I said. "Let's get my horse. You don't know how much I enjoyed you and your wife's company, and how refreshed I am with the meal."

"But it is early yet," Amalia protested.

"I must be back in Brownsville by five o'clock," I replied. In a few minutes Ramon had saddled my horse and brought it to the door of the hut. He and his wife, the horned toad, the four dogs and the two little goats were all there to see me off. I stuck my hand in my pocket to reach for money, and found I had two dollars. I held them out to Ramon.

"No! No! No!—valgame dios—impossible! You were my guest and I cannot accept your money."

I know by the earnestness in his voice that my money would not be accepted, so going into the cabin as though I had forgotten something, I threw the two dollars on the bedding. Then I mounted my horse and rode away. Ramon and his wife remaining in the doorway until I disappeared around the corner of the hills.

The End of the Story. Four days later Floyd Gibbons of the Chicago Tribune and I were riding from Brownsville to Harlingen where Col. R. L. Bullard, commanding the American troops along the Rio Grande, was stationed. We stopped at a farmhouse on the way to get a drink of water. An old American rancher, whom we know, met us at the gate.

"Are you the fellows looking out for news?" he queried. "Yes," answered Gibbons. "We are going over to see Colonel Bullard." "That's fine," answered the man at the gate. "You can give him a message from me. Tell him that I killed one of the greaser bandits last night."

"Is that so?" commented Gibbons. "Did he attack you?"

"None."

"Was he armed?"

"None. But I caught him running off with two of my chickens and a bag of corn. He said that he was hungry and was taking the stuff to his wife, but they all put that kind of stuff around here. They put a sorrowful tale when you catch them, and if you turn around they will knife you in the back."

"Humph," said Gibbons. "Will you let us see him?"

"Sure," invited the old farmer. "Come right along," and he led the way to a clump of mesquite beyond his chicken coop.

"There is the old devil," he pointed to the pathetic figure of a small Mexican huddled there on the ground—stone dead.

"I kicked him over with my foot and beneath the elms of blood which were plastered on his once pleasant face I recognized Ramon."

"Poor Amalia!" I gasped aloud. "What's that?" the farmer asked. "Nothing," I said as I walked away. We got our drink of water, mounted, and rode away.

"The old farmer sure enough got one of the bandits," said Gibbons laughing. "Shut up, damn you!" I answered, much to his surprise.

U.S. TO AID CARRANZA

LANSING HINTS AT RECOGNITION AFTER PAN-AMERICAN MEET.

EMBARGO IS BELIEVED NEAR

Villa and Leaders of Other Factions Will Be Unable to Obtain Munitions—Skinner Expected to Be Appointed Ambassador to Republic.

Washington, Oct. 12.—A formal announcement was made on Saturday by the secretary of state following a Pan-American conference which asserted the recognition of Gen. Venustiano Carranza as president de facto of Mexico.

Here is the statement issued by Mr. Lansing:

"The conference, after careful consideration of the facts, have found that the Carranzista party is the only party possessing the essentials for recognition as the de facto government of Mexico, and they have so reported to their respective governments."

In accordance with this decision the United States immediately will accredit a diplomatic representative to General Carranza.

It is believed in Washington the European governments will follow the lead of the United States.

The president is considering Robert P. Skinner, who has been withdrawn as consul general in London because of British objections to the character of trade reports he submitted to the state department, for appointment as ambassador to the Carranza government.

Diplomatic relations thus being restored between the United States and Mexico, as presided over by General Carranza, President Wilson will enter into negotiations for settlement of the various questions which have arisen as a result of the revolutions that have devastated the neighborhood "republics."

It will be the president's duty, in accordance with the obligations to the head of a friendly state, to prevent the United States from serving as a base for revolutionary movements.

He will issue a proclamation reapplying the embargo on munitions, as far as Mexico is concerned.

In other words, General Villa is no longer to enjoy any support from this country.

Indianapolis, Oct. 9.—Practically a complete denial of having knowledge of wrongdoing on the part of anybody in the primaries, registration sessions and general election was made on Thursday by Mayor Joseph E. Bell denied that he gave James ("Bud") Gibson $11 in one-dollar bills election day and asserted, in explanation of the testimony concerning the receipt by himself of $500 from Lucius O. Hamilton, that it formed a part of a payment amounting to $3,070 credited on the treasurer's report to himself and Thomas Taggart.

Examination in chief of Mayor Bell was concluded at the time Judge W. H. Elchhorn adjourned court.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials; all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. Richmond, 84 Progress Avenue, Providence, R. I.

From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N.Y.

PERU, N.Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three children, and felt worn out all the time. This splendid medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—Mrs. MARIA IRWIN, R.F.D. 1, Peru, N.Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. DUNCAN, Forest Avenue, West Quincy, Mass.

$5.00 and $7.50

Many pleasing inspirations are reflected in the designing of these attractive hats.

Decidedly clever are the draped turbans of silk velvet which have beaded ornaments as their chief decoration.

Equally alluring are the larger hats, which adapt themselves more becomingly to many faces than the smaller creations. They have crowns of contrasting color and are trimmed with fur and ornaments. $5.00 and $7.50.
